Welcome to BEAR COUNTRY

Disneyland's Newest Theme Land

Bear Country brings a whole new "woody" look and a brand new attraction to "the happiest place on earth."

"Davy Crockett's Explorer Canoes" give guests a chance to navigate the "Rivers of America" in their own "birch bark" canoes.

LOCATED near Frontierland and directly adjacent to the "Haunted Mansion," Bear Country brings a whole new "woody" look to "the happiest place on earth." In fact, this is the first time since the opening of New Orleans Square and the "Pirates of the Caribbean" attraction in '66 and '67 that Disneyland has opened an all new theme land along with a major adventure.

A lighthearted re-creation of the Great Northwest, Bear Country features "themed" food and merchandise centers, family-fun adventures, and Disneyland's 54th major attraction, "Country Bear Jamboree."

A fast-paced, rib-tickling, country-western music revue laced with comedy and catchy tunes, "Country Bear Jamboree" stars 22 lifelike Northwest animals who sing, strum, and pun their way through a thoroughly entertaining 15-minute presentation. Some 1,800 guests an hour can enjoy this humorous show in the "Jamboree's" two pine-walled theatres.

Other adventures featured in Disneyland's new four-acre backwoods include "Davy Crockett's Explorer Canoes," the "Golden Bear Lodge" restaurant, the "Mile Long Bar" refreshment center, "Ursus H. Bear's Wilderness Outpost," the "Indian Trading Post," and "Teddi Barra's Swinging Arcade."

The first of these, "Davy Crockett's Explorer Canoes," provides guests with a chance to ply Disneyland's adventuresome "Rivers of America" aboard 35-foot long "birch bark" canoes. Eighteen guests, accompanied by two Disneyland Guides, paddle their stout craft through treacherous rapids, past cascading waterfalls, and deep into the heart of the untamed American wilderness.

Also located along the shores of the "Rivers of America" is the "Golden Bear Lodge" restaurant. This picturesque fast-food facility offers a menu full of savory food to satisfy the most ravishing Northwoods appetite, while further dining adventure is provided by the patio picnic tables situated with a spectacular view of the "wilderness."

The "Mile Long Bar," specializing in snacks and carbonated thirst quenchers for dry-throated, hungry guests, is an adventure in itself. Disney "Imagineers" have created (via the use of two specially designed optical mirrors) the illusion that the bar is stretching into infinity. And, while guests are busy pondering this optical phenomenon, they are entertained by the mirthful banter of Buff, Max, and Melvin—three jabbering heads from the "Country Bear Jamboree" that also hang around together in the "Mile Long Bar."

Even shopping takes on a down-home flavor in the land's two major merchandise outlets, "Ursus H. Bear's

The highlight of Disneyland's new Bear Country is the rib-tickling "Country Bear Jamboree."

Wilderness Outpost" and the "Indian Trading Post." Both offer a wide variety of souvenirs and gifts, which are in keeping with the Northwoods theme. And landborne explorers will find that ordinary penny arcade machines become something else again in "Teddi Barra's Swinging Arcade," where fanciful Disney characters and backwoods decorations add a new perspective to age-old favorites.

Disneyland's new $8-million wilderness settlement, featuring "Country Bear Jamboree," is the newest of seven theme lands at "the happiest place on earth." And, as Melvin, Buff, and Max would say, "If you ain't visited Bear Country and seen and heard 'Country Bear Jamboree,' yew just ain't lived."

Y'all come out and live a little, hear!

"Ursus H. Bear's Wilderness Outpost" features a variety of gift items with a true, Northwoods flavor.

Realistic, Indian gifts are the specialty of Bear Country's "Indian Trading Post."

Magic in Miniature

A journey through
Disneyland's "Storybook Land"

Disneyland's "Storybook Land." Bringing to life villages, castles, and scenes from the world's best-loved fables.

A kingdom in miniature, "Storybook Land" in Fantasyland presents lifelike re-creations of villages, castles, and idyllic scenes from the world's best-loved fables. Like other adventures in "the happiest place on earth," this trip into pure fantasy takes visitors out of the present and into a realm of make believe and, for an instant, recaptured childhood.

Guests embark on gaily painted boats and, once through the Monstro the Whale entrance, they seem to become a part of "Storybook Land" itself.

The banks of the canal are lined with small-scale reproductions of Walt Disney Productions' best-loved movie settings in exact detail. Guests will see Kensington Square over which Peter Pan flew, Gepetto's village high in the snow-covered Alps where Pinocchio came to life, and Ratty's waterfront dwelling and Mr. Toad's home from the cartoon feature, "The Wind In The Willows."

Guests also will enjoy scenic views of the crazy quilt country from "Wynken, Blinken, and Nod," the quaint woodside cottage of the Seven Dwarfs where Snow White met her prince charming, the place where Alice fell through the rabbit hole into Wonderland, and, gleaming high above "Storybook Land," the golden spires of Cinderella's Castle.

Designed and constructed with the magical creativity that characterizes all of Disneyland's attractions, "Storybook Land" acquires its most authentic touch with the largest concentration of dwarf and miniature plants ever assembled in one exhibit.

Though this might be considered an adventure primarily for children, it's hard to tell who enjoys "Storybook Land" the most—the little ones, their parents, or their grandparents with wistful looks.

Cinderella's Castle, in miniature, towers high above "Storybook Land."

Disneyland's

At Disneyland's New Century Clock Shop, guests will find an almost unlimited variety of timepieces.

NEW CENTURY

What makes it popular is what makes it tick.

The first device which could be called a clock—at least as we know it—appeared in the 13th century. It had wheels, a dial, and an hour hand. And it may have been the only “simple” clock man ever made, judging from the timepieces in Disneyland's New Century Clock Shop, sponsored by Elgin National Industries, Inc., and located on Main Street, U.S.A.

Here, guests will find an almost unlimited variety of interesting, fashionable, accurate timepieces of almost every size and description. And if one were to ask why so many different clocks and watches have been created, the answer would have to be “because people themselves are so many and so different.”

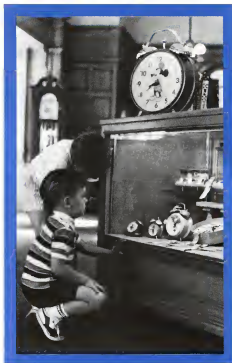

For example, a housewife looking for an inexpensive clock to hang on a kitchen wall would find her search indeed frustrating if the only clocks available were Elgin “Diamond Clustered Wristwatches” that sell for as much as $675 apiece. And how well would a skin diver fare if the only thing he could strap to his wrist was an Elgin, cordless electric “Jumbo Clock” that stands some 18 inches tall? Or how would the employer who wants to present a dedicated employee with an expensive wrist-watch feel if the only timepieces he could find were those that toll the hour and half-hour on two- and three-rod chords, sell for $80 apiece, and are known as “Strike Clocks!!”

No, today's clock shop must feature a wide variety of different watches and clocks to please the varied tastes

Some of the most popular items in the Shop are the Elgin decorator clocks.

Walt Disney character watches and clocks come in almost every shape and size.

CLOCK SHOP

of many different people. And Disneyland's New Century Clock Shop is no exception.

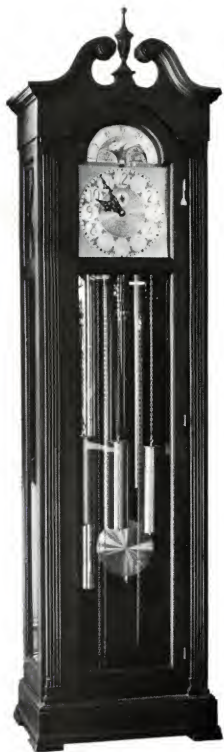

Here, guests will find (or can order) calendar watches, automatic watches, chronographs, electric watches, electronic watches, casual and dress watches, pocket and pendant watches, and special watches such as Walt Disney character watches, divers' watches, engineers' watches, nurses' watches, and sportsmen's timers.

In the clock line, the shop features hand-wound, battery-powered, and electric clocks, wall clocks, kitchen clocks, alarm clocks, travel alarm clocks, digital clocks, clock-radios, table clocks, and Elgin's decorator clocks, including "Traditional Heirloom Strike and Chime Timepieces," "Handcrafted Hall Clocks," "Baroque Decorator Timepieces," "Mediterranean and Early American Classics," and "Galaxy" and "Contemporary" timepieces.

And the prices of the over 250 different watches and clocks displayed in the shop range from $9.95 for a Walt Disney character wristwatch to $1,020 for an Elgin "Aristocratic Grandfather Clock," featuring a Honduras mahogany case, an eight-day Westminster Chime movement, and a hand-painted, operating Moon Phase attachment that indicates the cycles of the moon.

Time. Its passage has fascinated man since he first realized that night divides day. And since then, he's developed numerous ways to measure it—some of the most accurate and elegant of which can be found right in Disneyland's own New Century Clock Shop.

The most expensive timepiece in the Shop is this Elgin "Aristocratic Grandfather Clock," selling for $1,020.

THEY'VE BEEN DYING TO MEET YOU

Disneyland's very own, very "Haunted Mansion."

The corridor of doors in the "Haunted Mansion" is full of little, spine-tingling surprises.

The Grand Hall plays host to some rather spirited parties.

The mansion on the hill in Disneyland's New Orleans Square is no ordinary run-of-the-mill mansion. It's haunted—haunted by 999 of the most fun-loving ghosts, ghouls, and banshees ever to immaterialize. And they've been just dying to meet you.

In the development stages for more than ten years and built at a cost of seven million dollars, Disneyland's "Haunted Mansion" features not only its 999 floating, jumping, dancing residents, but also stretching rooms, creaking doors, flickering lights, and other little surprises guaranteed to send shivers up the spine of even the bravest visitor.

But you're not left to shiver on your own. Disneyland even supplies you with a Ghost Host to keep you company. And he does a pretty good job, if you like the kind of company you can hear but can't see.

The moment you walk in, he sets the scene for the unworldly experiences to come:

"When hinges creak in doorless chambers and strange and frightening sounds echo through the halls—whenever candlelights flicker where the air is deathly still—that is the time when ghosts are present, practicing their terror with ghoulish delight."

And he certainly isn't kidding.

Following his not-so-warm welcome, you are ushered into an eerie, stretching room from which you must find your way out, down a corridor of haunted portraits, and into your very own "Doom Buggy," which will take you through a labyrinth of cobwebbed halls and pitch-black corridors.

On your way, you'll see such unearthly wonders as an endless hallway that beckons you to enter but offers no end, a corridor of doors that seem to offer little resistance to the ghoulish forces trying to break them down, a seance circle conducted by a bodyless head in a crystal ball, the Grand Hall wherein a "spirited" party is being held for some of the "Mansion's" residents, and a haunted attic, complete with fluttering bats and the ominous sound of a beating heart.

Of course, no journey through a haunted world would be complete without at least one tour of a graveyard, and your Ghost Host doesn't let you down.

Here in this park and playground of the spooks who inhabit the "Haunted Mansion," crypt doors creak, tombstones quake, and the spirits join in to sing the "Mansion's" theme song, "Grim Grinning Ghosts." While medieval minstrels play, a Victorian-era King and Queen balance a teeter-totter on a gravestone, marble busts suddenly "come to life" to join in the chorus, playful spirits ride their bicycles 'round and 'round the tombstones, a headless knight "sings," and picnicking ghosts raise their glasses in toast to one another and the wonderful fun they're having.

What is said to be haunted, sometimes isn't. Or is it?

When it comes to haunted graveyards, your Ghost Host doesn't let you down.

Once you've toured the graveyard, your "Doom Buggy" passes "The Crypt," a somber setting where you find a trio of hitchhikers grinning ghoulishly as they seek a way out—preferably the seat right next to you.

Visit Disneyland's "Haunted Mansion." As a home for an out-of-this-world assortment of ghosts, ghouls, poltergeists, fluttering bats, talking ravens, screaming banshees, hooting owls, and baying hounds, it's a gasp.
